

ROANOKE CHAMBER BRASS

The Roanoke Chamber Brass quintet has been part of the arts culture in southwestern Virginia since the dawn of the new millennium. Its members are established educators as well as musicians. Roanoke Chamber Brass is the quintet-in-residence at Hollins University and also performs frequently in various church programs. They have accompanied the Salem Choral Society and appear yearly at the Drum Corps International Competition in Salem, Virginia, to open the festivities. Since its inception in 2000, the Roanoke Chamber Brass has solidified its reputation as one of southwestern Virginia's finest chamber ensembles.

"The Roanoke Chamber Brass has always provided quality music and professionalism every time I have worked with them, which has been quite often over the past several years. As a conductor, it is important to work with musicians who not only display considerable artistic abilities, but are easy to work with, punctual, and are genuinely pleased to be playing the music at hand. The Roanoke Chamber Brass exemplifies all of the aforementioned attributes. I could not recommend them more highly."

"Roanoke Chamber Brass, from Bach to Bluegrass, you just don't hear that very often do you?.....It doesn't get any better than that!"
